

SARFUS (Surface Enhanced Ellipsometric Contrast) Microscope. The SARFUS technique allows to increase the axial sensitivity of an optical microscope by a factor of around 100 without reducing lateral resolution. As a result, nano-objects (including biological ones, such as DNA, proteins, phospholipids, etc) can be optically visualized in real time in air or in aqueous media.